He asserts that the whole of the funds required for carrying bawker, aged 46 years, who came by their deaths out such an undertaking could be raised out of the lands of the Territory now lying idle and comparatively worthless, and that it would soon begin to pay after its completion. The distance from the Government Gums, Farina -to which place a railway is now in course

If the Government of South Australia could only see the great advantage of having a splendid harbour at the north coast of Australia, in the proximity of the Eastern Archipelago, China, Japan, and North America, I am sure they would begin at once, with the cheap Chinese labour they have now at their disposal, to make a good pier. Mr. Knight goes on to advocate a broad and liberal policy in dealing with the Northern Territory, a policy which we believe finds a supporter in Sir WILLIAM JERVOIS. the Governor of South Australia. The Government which so resolutely buckled to the task of making the Overland Telegraph line could accomplish the more difficult but infinitely more important one of constructing the proposed Trans-continental Railway. Mr. Knight tells us that within six months rates could of course not be maintained, and al after the completion of the telegraph line the colony netted nearly a quarter of a million sterling extra on its wheat harvest through last quotations. According to recent reports the telegraph enabling sales to be made in foreign markets. If this was the case with the telegraph, how much more profitable is a railway likely to prove? Turning to comment on the performance, place must be given to the ladies. Mrs. Hookey, in her representation of the aristocratic dame, evinced. thorough appreciation of the character. The careful study she had evidently given the part bore good fruit, and the consequence was that the Lady Matilda Vavasour's appearance on the stage last night was a finished piece of acting. The anxious and scheming mother, the strongminded, proud, and wilful woman; and the exult ant foe were all alike faithfully represented, and Mrs. Hookey has decidedly scored another success. The lovely, passionate, playful character of Lilian Varasour gave Mrs. Bernard the opportunity of achieving another triumph. Every look, gesture, attitude, and intonation of voice must have been the subject of minute study, founded upon the most artistic taste, and the perfect result of the whole gave a delighted audience as great a treat as has fallen to their lot for many a day. As Mrs. Bernard was realistic in her delineation of Lilian, so was she in person a sight to please the eye. The expressive countenance of the true artist was there, and, nature having endowed her with singular grace of person, Mrs. Bernard's Lilian Vavasour will, we think, continue for some time as a very pleasant memory to those who bad the privilege of witnessing the happy conof him, says they are noth thush too poor to maption. We have said that Mrs. Bernard scored another triumph, and advisedly, for it is indeed a triumph of artistic skill to star the sympathetic tear in the eye of the listener The emotional parts of the delineation were represented with such natural angulah of soul that mony a heart had a tender ahard touched by the mimiogrief. The part of the parcenue Mrs. Bunter fell to the lot of Mrs. Chervau, who gave the charactor a thorough rendering; being, however, but aubaidiary, the part gave but a poor opportunity to display the undoubted histrionic talents possessed by Mrs. Chervau. Miss Lejeune made her debut in the part of the centimental and would be mathetic Fanny Bunter, and, all things considered the character was fairly well portraved. -A little experience will do much bring out the points which this lady gave evidence of possessing, and amongst other things experience will teach the mode of throwing.

pleasant voice farther into the house; with practice, too, the power of merging self in the imaginary character will increase.

The part of Marmaduke Vavasour found a good exponent in Mr. Auld, who was capitally got up; but he might, with advantage, have brought out his points with a little more force. He earned a fair share of applause. Mr. Crysparkle's delineation of the character of Samus Brown, the Liverpool merchant, had obviously been carefully studied, and the result was eminently satisfactory. The suber, high-minded man of business, whose life had hitherte been uncoloured by romance and full of hard facts. was portrayed with the utmost fidelity to nature. In all the scenes with Lilian he was manly graightforward, and frank, as suited the character, but he was rather wanting in passion later on. Saving this slight drawback, the representation was all that sould be desired. Mr. Crysparkle's two being as different as the characters of the fine acting appealed strongly to the sympathies of the audience and elicited frequent, and well depiness Bunter, who was not in the secret, arrives served applause. Bertie Fitz-Urse, the shallowto take his daughter home. At the same time pated, vapid, but good-natured young sprig of nobility, was admirably represented by Mr. and the shakiness of Brown's house, to save Leslie. The role was not an easy one to sustain but the character was depicted in a thoroughly realistic and most consistent manner through out. His wooing first of his cousin and subsequently Fanny Bunter called forth peals of merriment and gained well merited plaudits were capital tricks. P.C. 228 said that on Monday evening he saw the prisoner in Pound-lane, throwing dice on a tray and gambling for money with several men who sat around, and who ran away upon seeing witness arrest the prisoner.

The prisoner denied the charge, and said was walking in the street and was not gambling. Fined 31, in default three days' imprisonment.

Leung Alik, a druggist, was charged stealing a cotton umbrella value half-a-dollar. The prisoner and another man went into an umbrella shop and asked for an umbrella. They nicked up the one produced in Court, which was on the counter. As the master of the shop was out for a little time, a sooper, working in another part of the shop, told the prisoner to wait for a minute or two until the master turned. The cooper then went about his own business. Shortly afterwards the prisoner and the other man walked out of the shop with the umbrella. The cooper ran out after them and arrested the prisoner. Who, however, broke loose rom him and ran away. A constable hearing the ery of "thief" and seeing a crowd running arrested the leading man, who turned out to be

CHINA AND RUSSIA IN CENTRAL

During the past week telegrams have been arriving from China of a more or less disturbing character. In one we are told that Chung-How, the Chinese envoy, who had returned from St. Petersburg after pegotiating for the surrender of Kuldja, was disgraced; in another that he had been decapitated, and that there had been a popular disturbance in Peking ; lastly, that China was buying wax material from Europe on a large scale. All this points with certainty to serious differences with Russia in regard to the retrocession of the province of Kuldia, with all its commercial and strategicadvantages. We spoke in a recentarticle of the probability that Russis would find the claims of the Government of Peking militant Power when opposed to European forces might have led her to anticipate. The nulimited command of men and possession of arms of premoe, there are still many residents who were cision had to be taken into account: the former an advantage of a very preponderating kind for the Chinese, and the latter going for towards equalizing the disparity hitherto existing by reason of superiority of discipline and military science on the part of the Russians. Chung-How, as we were informed yesterday, has probably not been actually beheaded, but his condemnation would not the less indicate the sudden recrudesence of a nutional and anti-foreign spirit in China; and may presage the commencement if hostilities in the centre of Asia for the recovery of the wrestled province, which will find ample occupation for any force the Russians can muster in that remote region. From this point of view it has a special interest The following appointments have been made for us, since such a conflict would leave Russia little able, if disposed, to proscoute a cumpaign against the Tekke Tarkemans or Mery. Whatever may be the issue, we may anticipate that the Kuldja difficulty will give Russia occupation of a very disturbing character for some time to come, and the effect of such preoccupation will be felt west of the Indus in any Russian enterprises in that direction. No doubt, if All the above named Ministers formed part of this diplomatic imbroglic should lead to actual Mr. Gladstone's last Administration, except | hostilities Russia has the alternative of carrying the war into the enemy's country, at vulnerable India. Most of them, however, held different points. She may threaten Peking and harry the seaboard. But for this theatre of operations it may well be doubted whether the Russians have forces at their command on the Amoor and neighbouring coasts sufficient to enable them to not with affect. By the side of such a war as this, the dispute between Chine and Japan respecting the suzerainty of the Loocheo group becomes insignificant; save in so far as the persistency of the Chinese Government in this direction points to the characteristic tensoity of the race in any object where their national pride of dominion is concerned, and the dominant influence at this moment of the more bigoted party of politicians at Peking, always hostile to foreign innevation or encroachment. Pall Mali Gazette.

The Times, referring to the meeting held at the Mansion House, says there can be no doubt that thrift is a sadly neglected virtue. The working classes—and we might go much higher -will never be persuaded that it is really necessary to save. No appeals to their common sense, their selfishness, or their self-respect will avail against the evident fact that improvidence is very seldom punished, or, at least, much punished, in this country. They see a vast number of institutions and societies, all framed on purely benevolent principles, for the relief of every kind of want. Many of them would feel they had not availed themselves of their full rights if they had not claimed the benefit of some eleamosynary institution of other. Impro ridence, though a blot on the national character and fatal to the formation of the higher virtues s one secret of our national power. Below a certain class we have comparatively few persons independent means. There remarkable feature of English society in com parison with the French than the number of persons who continue in harness, doing a fair amount of work the whole of their lives, when by the most moderate exercise of prudence and self-denial they might have acquired a competence at forty or lifty. The result is that they are serving their country, to the very last, and no doubt the country is the better for the active service of every citizen. As a rule however, improvidence is a loss to the country. It throws the aged, the orphan, and the widow upon the hands of a society that has not the heart to repudiate them. Industry is continually clogged and burdened with such encumbrances but in this, as in some other respects, England may find she has to mend her ways.

How soon popular songs become old. Even now "My Grandfather's Clock" may be classed among the old-time pieces..

Persons who send Musters of Tea throughthe Post in Tins are requested to have them made flat or square instead of round, as it is impossible to pack round tins securely in the mail bags. It is believed that the tea will travel more safely in flat tine, which are not so liable as round ones to be bulged in. 4 by 3 by 11 inches is suggested as a good size. The tins should not have sharp corners.

Many boxes of letters are received at the Post Office not sealed, that is to say, the box is pression of a seal. The attention of boxholders is called to the necessity of earefully sealing such boxes with some recognisable seal, and of sending a chitbook or receipt with them. The omission of the latter precention leaves a doubt as to whether the contents of the box ever reached the Pest Office; the omission of the former, as to whether part of them might not have been ab-

I fell to musing. We are too intent On gaining that to which our minds are bent; We choose, then fling the fragments far and wide, But spoil the picture on the other side! A prize is offered; others seek it, too; But on we press with only self in view, We gain our point, and punse well satisfied, But ah! the picture on the other side. On this, a sound of revelry we hear; On that, a wall of mouning strikes the car; On this a carriage stands with groom and bride, A hearso is waiting on the other side.

We call it trach-we trend it roughly down, The thing which others might have deemed a crown An infant's oyes, anointed, see the gold, Where we, world-blinded, only brass behold. We pluck a weed and fing it to the breeze; A Cower of fairest hue another sees, We strike a chord with caroless smile and jest, And brook a heart-string in another's breast. Trend soft and softer till as on you go. With eyes washed clear in Love's ancinting glow; Life's page well finished, turn it, satisfied, And lo! Heaven's picture's on the other side.

AN AWKWARD PORTMANTEAU. The proprietress of a small inn at Valenciennes has just met with a curious adventure. It seems from the account given of the incident by the Echo du Nord that a man presented himself at the inn and made a request to be admitted, together with a very allotted to him a second floor room, offered in expressing the juice of the grapes:help him in carrying upstairs the burden which, seemed too heavy for his unaided it contained articles of a very delicate and ror perceived that something moved within it. So great was her terror that she sank down speechless and breathless in a chair, and in that position was found by a gendarme who came to protest against the late, hour at which the place was kept open. As soon as the cause had been explained to this minion of the law, he forgot the primary object of his visit in his our iosity to explore the mysterious piece of luggage, and drawing his sword, soon solved all doubts by cutting open the leather. He had no sooner done so
